Ma Bell wants rate hike; hearings next week

By BERT CALDWELL
Montana Kaimin Reporter

Competition and increased consumer awareness will confront Mountain Bell next Tuesday when the Montana Public Service Commission (PSC) begins hearings in Helena on telephone rate hikes.

The rate increases are the first requested by Ma Bell in nine years, and would boost annual operating revenues $11.8 million above the $65,132,000 paid by Montana customers in 1976.

Frank Bell, public relations manager for Mountain Bell's Montana office, compared this 16 percent increase with the 70 percent average consumer price rise since 1969.

Mountain Bell maintained the current rates despite inflation by improving efficiency within the firm, Bell said.

Bill Johnson, former PSC staff member who has become a utility consultant, said Monday that a nationwide doubling of revenues from long distance calls was also a major factor in stabilizing consumer phone costs.

Bell said customers in larger Montana cities, including Missoula, will face bigger hikes than other areas because the demand for city phone service has soared during the past decade.

Proposed Increases

If the PSC approves the proposed increases, he said, installation of a home phone will cost $23.20, compared to $17.85 now, and the cost of monthly service will rise from $5.90 to $7.30.

He said Mountain Bell has decided to adopt interstate evening discounts for Montana intrastate use.

Although revenues per call decrease when the discounts are initiated, Bell explained, the increase in the number of calls eventually yields more money.

New Rates in March

The PSC will not decide the details of the new rates until March. The November hearings will determine how much money Mountain Bell is entitled to make on its Montana investments.

PSC Executive Director Bill Optiz said Monday that Mountain Bell wants a 15 percent return on its equity instead of the 10 percent it now receives.

Opponents of the increase will concede only an 11 percent return, he said.

The Montana Consumer Counsel office is marshaling opposition to Mountain Bell's proposals.

Consumer Opposition

On Monday Geoffrey Brazier, consumer counsel attorney, said expert witnesses from outside Montana will testify against the $11.8 million requested and suggest a $2.3 million boost.

Calling the Mountain Bell proposals "one of the biggest rate increases ever requested in Montana," Brazier said, "they're (Mountain Bell) used to being a little more self-regulating than they will be in the future."

He said the Consumer Counsel witnesses possess credentials equal, if not superior, to those of Mountain Bell experts.

More Time

The phone company was unprepared for a cost of service study the opponents said was needed to determine Mountain Bell's expenses Brazier said. As a result, he continued, the hearings were split to allow time for the study's completion.

Johnson said the study should reveal whether Mountain Bell is charging its business customers the full cost of providing them service.

Figures indicate enrollment down

Enrollment at the University of Montana is 8,240 this fall — down 196 students or 2.4 percent from a year ago, UM President Richard Bowers said yesterday.

Enrollment last fall was 8,436.

Bowers said the Academic Program Review and Planning Committee will today receive a detailed breakdown of enrollment according to departments. The committee will determine UM's new student-faculty ratio and the number of faculty who must be cut to reach the 19:1 ratio ordered by the Legislature.

Philip Bain, director of admissions and records, said the figure Bowers released is correct "give or take 10 people."

However, Bain added that the breakdown the review committee will get today is accurate.

Enrollment at UM had been climbing steadily for 16 years until last fall, when it dropped 390 students from the previous year.

Some of those students have been transferring to Montana State University, which shows an enrollment increase of 481 students this fall over last year. Enrollment at MSU is 9,340.

Eastern Montana College in Billings reports an enrollment of 3,453, up 150 from last Fall Quarter.

Northern Montana College in Havre reports an enrollment of 1,319, up 80 from last Fall Quarter.

Western Montana College in Dillon reports its enrollment of 823 students is the same as last year.

Figures for the Montana College of Mineral Science and Technology were not available.

CB, ASUM members plan trip to Dillon for executive meeting

By PATTY ELICH
Montana Kaimin Reporter

ASUM officials and Central Board members are planning a get-together next month with student leaders from the other five units of the Montana University System.

Called the Student Executive Conference, the meeting will be held Nov. 4, 5 and 6 at a resort about 40 miles north of Dillon, according to Central Board member Cary Holmquist.

Holmquist, who has been helping to organize the event, said about 61 student leaders from the state will gather at the Bedspread resort area for a series of workshops and panel discussions.

ASUM will spend $435 on the conference, Holmquist said. Bozeman's student government will pay $125, and representatives from the other four colleges—Eastern Montana College, Western Montana College, Northern Montana College and Montana Tech—will contribute about $50 each, he added.

The money will pay for food and accommodations for those attending the conference, and cover the expenses for speakers at the event, he said.

Judge May Speak

Speakers may include Gov. Thomas Judge and Commissioner of Higher Education Lawrence Pettit. Holmquist said both officials have made tentative commitments to speak to the group.

University of Montana President Richard Bowers may also speak at the conference, Holmquist said.

Holmquist said Sid Thomas, a member of the state Board of Regents and a law student at UM, will definitely come to the conference.

He will give the student leaders tips on how to communicate effectively with the regents, Holmquist said.

Thomas also is scheduled to participate in a panel discussion with Catherine Swift, staff attorney in Pettit's office, and Kurk Peterson, student body president of EMC. The panel will discuss the role of university students in collective bargaining negotiations between school faculty and administrators.

Other topics scheduled for discussion at the conference include:

- student fees. ASUM President Greg Henderson will talk about legal questions concerning who actually owns student money and how the funds can be used.

- liquor in student union buildings. Henderson will also lead this discussion.

- legal services. Bruce Barrett, director of ASUM Legal Services, will tell representatives from other schools about ASUM's program.

Also, Holmquist said, the student body presidents of the six Montana schools will discuss the establishment of a state student association. Henderson, who proposed the idea, says a state-wide association would allow student leaders from all over the state to speak with one voice on various issues.

Fred Weldon, director of UM's

Center for Student Development, will conduct a workshop on leadership. Also, some faculty members from UM's interpersonal communications department are expected to advise the student leaders on "how to act under pressure situations," Holmquist said.

Holmquist said 11 ASUM officers and CB members plan to attend the conference.

CB members are Susan Heald, Jeff Gray, Greg Oliphant, Cynthia Redman, Sonja McGee, Kathleen Royland and John Fitzgerald; Henderson, ASUM Business Manager Steve Huntington and ASUM Vice President Dean Mansfield also plan to attend.

Weather

Variable cloudiness is forecast today and tonight. Chance of showers 20 percent. Highs will be in the 50s today and Wednesday. Lows 30 to 35 both nights.

Rezoning proposal defeated by council

By LESLIE WOMACK
Montana Kaimin Reporter

The Missoula City Council last night defeated a proposal to rezone two parcels of land in Hellgate Canyon, including the last piece of undeveloped land within convenient walking distance of the University of Montana.

The parcels, located northeast of the UM campus, across the Clark Fork River, are zoned for industrial and commercial use. The proposal would have rezoned the area to commercial and multifamily residential use.

The rezoning proposal needed 9 favorable votes out of 12 because the majority of the property owners in the area opposed the rezoning.

The proposal received 8 votes in favor and 3 against. The council members voting against it were Ward 2 Alderman Stan Healy, Ward 4 Alderman John Toole and Ward 6 Alderman Bill Potts. Ward 3 Alderwoman Jeanne Ransavage was absent.

Ward 1 Alderman Cass Chinske, who proposed the rezoning, said the council has a "total responsibility to the community to act in its best interest."

Toole rebutted Chinske's

The hope against Hope

Thanks to Bill Junkermier, the director of ASUM Programming, Bob (on the road for Texaco) Hope will come to Missoula in December.

Junkermier is that same hipster who nearly brought Kiss and Alice Cooper to the University of Montana this summer. Junkermier is the same man who, far from delivering us from evil, delivered to us the Osmonds on Oct. 15.

There is no doubt a considerable number of UM students probably don't care much for Hope's oil well humor. Besides, he can be seen on television regularly.

Similarly, the Osmonds have a weekly show and they are not extremely popular with the university community.

So why does Junkermier bring entertainers to UM if the students would rather see someone else?

Junkermier says ASUM Programming needs the money.

ASUM Programming was guaranteed a profit on the two shows because they were organized by promoters. The Osmonds drew a good crowd (6,700) and Hope will almost certainly sell out.

The problem with these two shows is that the audience is mainly comprised of persons who are not UM students. Missoula grade schoolers came in droves to scream at Donny Osmond, and people from all over western Montana will probably turn out to see Hope.

But it is not Bill Junkermier's job to bring in the stars for the teenyboppers. Nor is it his responsibility to entertain Montana's Middle Americans.

If Missoula must see Bob Hope or the Osmonds, let the Elk's Club put on an extravaganza. ASUM Programming's main objective should be to provide entertainment for the students who fund that organization.

If big events must be held to subsidize the smaller shows, Junkermier should be more selective when choosing entertainers. Judging from some of the entertainers he has scheduled or tried to schedule, it is hard to believe that Junkermier maintains a steady interest in serving UM students.

It is not comforting to learn that Hope will be paid $25,000 for an hour and a half on stage. That, as Sam Snead would say, is a lot of hot dogs and cokes.

It seems reasonable to assume that somewhere out there in entertainment land there is a musical group or a road show of some kind or a speaker which would be more likely to please UM crowds. Until that show rolls around,

UM students can only sit back helplessly, hoping that Junkermier will suddenly straighten up and do his job, hoping that Texaco will still work hard to keep their trust and hoping against Hope.

Task Force Wrong

Editor: Driscoll's Oct. 18 article regarding Scholars Press contained several errors which were taken from the Humanities B Task Force report on the Department of Religious Studies. These and other mistakes in the report have been corrected in a departmental response and in the chairman's presentation to the Academic Review and Planning Committee on Oct. 12.

The article referred to enrollments in religious studies as "unhealthy." The student/faculty ratio in religious studies is the second highest in the humanities and has remained stable during a period when the ratios of other humanities and the university at large have declined sharply. The article also reported that faculty members spend too much time working in the press and that the relationship between the press and the department is obscure. In fact, only two faculty members are associated with Scholars Press, and neither receives a reduction in teaching responsibilities because of his additional service. The only exception to this rule has been three quarters when released time for one faculty member was purchased with funds from private sources, hence at no expense to the university or the Montana taxpayer. The relationship of the press to the department and the university is clearly set down in bylaws which are matters of public record.

Apparently, the task force did not read them.

In times of cost accounting, it is well to recall that the support which our sponsors contribute to the press constitutes a massive infusion of outside capital and creates jobs for citizens of our community. The department is pleased to perform this and other services for the university and the state. We invite all to drop by to review first hand what our department has done to create a national center for the academic study of religion.

James W. Flanagan
chairman, religious studies

Meet the BPA

The Missoulian Oct. 16 contained a supplement that has potentially much more importance to its readers than do the discount store ads usually found there. With bright graphics and easy-to-read writing, the four-page brochure by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) was an attempt to inform the citizens of the Northwest about a new planning procedure that may have serious long-range implications for the energy future of our region.

Environment

The BPA is a federal agency that serves an area including Oregon, Washington, Idaho, western Montana and bits of California, Wyoming, Nevada and Utah. It markets electricity from 30 hydroelectric dams and runs electrical substations and transmission lines. Currently, its hydroelectric dams are fast becoming obsolete, and new sources of energy are being explored.

The BPA brochure tells of a "Role Environmental Impact Statement" (EIS) which discusses the "BPA's present role in the Pacific Northwest power supply system and examines a number of energy options for BPA and the region's electric energy future for the next twenty years."

The 3,200-page document took two years to prepare and a 60-page summary is available free from local BPA offices. The newspaper supplement, which appeared in 19 other Northwest newspapers as well as the Missoulian, goes on to say that the BPA is required to invite public comment on the Role EIS, and has set the deadline for citizen comment at Dec. 14.

The Role EIS, says the supplement, covers several issues which involve important environmental consequences. It raises questions about how much energy consumption can be reduced by conservation, how strong government conservation measures can be, and how willing the public will be to invest money in conservation improvements. On the issues concerning whether new power plants should be built, and what type they should be, the BPA considers coal, oil, gas and waste products as fuel, as well as nuclear power. They also raise the question as to how much more consumers would be willing to pay for electricity from less environmentally-degrading sources.

The EIS also covers what are described as the "renewable" energy sources: solar, wind and geothermal power. Questions are raised about their technological and economic feasibility, as well as their application to large-scale power production. Also, "exotic" energy sources, such as magnetohydrodynamics, nuclear fusion and ocean-related power are discussed.

The Role EIS discusses who should forecast future energy demands (government or utilities) and whether utility forecasters can be trusted to include enough conservation in their future energy need calculations.

To gather public comment on the EIS, the BPA is holding a preliminary series of information workshop meetings in eleven Northwest cities to familiarize citizens with the data, and then "response meetings" in the same cities where citizens can submit formal written statements or make oral comments.

Missoula's workshop meeting will be held at the Village Motor Inn on Wednesday, and the response meeting at the Holiday Inn on Nov. 10. BPA specialists will be on hand, and discussion topics will include forecasting, supply for industry, developing alternative energy sources and conservation.

The Role EIS process undertaken by the BPA is a good chance for environmentally-minded citizens to make their wishes known concerning the vital energy issues which face our region. From the looks of the BPA's newspaper supplement and the workshop and response meeting plans, the agency seems to be dedicated to at least the appearance of paying attention to public commentary.

The point is, if you have ever felt that conservation and alternative energy sources were feasible and necessary parts of a sane energy policy, here is a good opportunity to have your say before a federal agency. The proponents of nuclear power will probably be there, as well as those from the power industry who feel rising energy demands must be met, no matter what the environmental or social costs may be.

Those of us who call for a more responsible, far-sighted energy plan must be at the meetings to counteract their arguments. Energy policy affects, and will continue to affect, the lives of all of us. Will we stand idly by while the "powers that be" promote untested, unsafe nuclear power, while they push for more coal production and burning, and while they continue to relegate alternative energy sources to a second-class position?

Those of us who are dedicated to the goal of a humane, environmentally conscious energy policy should be at the meetings, well-prepared and ready to act.

ASUM committees lack chairmen, need replacements

By PATTY ELICH
Montana Kaimin Reporter

Two major ASUM committees are stalled for lack of chairmen.

The Legal Services Committee has not met yet this quarter because it has no chairman, according to ASUM Vice President Dean Mansfield.

Also, Publications Board, which oversees University of Montana student publications, has been without a leader since chairman Dan Cobb's term expired this fall. PB, which generally meets weekly, did not convene last week, according to PB Member Amy Curtis.

Mansfield, whose duties as vice president include overseeing the ASUM committees, said yesterday that he and ASUM President Greg Henderson will conduct interviews early this week to fill the Legal Services Committee chairmanship vacated by Eric Anderson.

In the meantime, Mansfield said, he will select one of the committee members as temporary chairman, so that the committee can conduct meetings.

Mansfield said the committee, which supervises ASUM Legal Services, is so important that it must start meeting. He said he will make sure that the committee meets "within the next few days."

Only current members of the committee are eligible to be chairman, according to the ASUM bylaws. The ASUM president selects the chairman, who then must be approved by a two-thirds vote of Central Board.

Mansfield said Henderson "may or may not" be ready to nominate someone for the post at this week's CB meeting.

"We don't want to rush into picking somebody," he added.

Publications Board lacks a chairman for different reasons.

Cobb reapplied for PB after his term expired. Henderson had nominated him last week, but CB asked Henderson to reconsider his choice.

CB's decision came after Montana Kaimin Editor Barbara Miller and Kaimin Business Manager Dick Clemow spoke against Cobb's reappointment. Miller said that PB, which oversees the Kaimin, had lacked direction under Cobb.

Renominate Cobb

Mansfield said that, rather than reopen applications for the job, he and Henderson will "come back with Dan's name again and be prepared to back it" at this week's CB meeting.

"I don't think CB is against Dan," Mansfield said. "They just want an explanation."

Mansfield noted that Henderson was absent from last week's meeting and therefore could not defend his nomination of Cobb.

"The only ones that were at the meeting to talk about PB were Barb (Miller) and Dick (Clemow)," Mansfield said.

Facts do not cease to exist because they are ignored.

—Aldous Huxley

Mansfield, who was chairman of last week's meeting in Henderson's absence, said at the time he had "no idea" why Henderson had decided to reappoint Cobb.

Defending his choice the following day, Henderson said Cobb was the only one who had applied for PB chairman.

He said that although PB should have a chairman as soon as possible so that it can meet, he would reconsider his selection of Cobb.

Cobb refused last week to comment on the question of his reappointment except to say that he will attend this week's CB meeting to rebut the complaints about him.

Report says Israelis smuggled uranium

The Israeli government amassed a secret nuclear arsenal 10 years ago by hijacking European uranium and smuggling several hundred pounds of enriched uranium from a nuclear plant in Pennsylvania, according to an article in Rolling Stone magazine. In its Nov. 15 issue, the magazine said former Presidents Lyndon Johnson and Gerald Ford were aware of smuggling at a nuclear plant in Apollo, Pa. "It is an open secret that Israel has a nuclear arsenal," one of the article's authors said. He added that a CIA estimate that the Israelis have 15 bombs "is probably conservative."

Young favors sanctions against South Africa

U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young said yesterday he personally favors some form of sanctions against the government of South Africa, which carried out a sweeping purge of black leaders and organizations last week. Young spoke with reporters following a Security Council meeting where black-ruled African nations called on the council to order a mandatory arms embargo and other sanctions against South Africa's white-minority regime. The United States previously has vetoed such an arms embargo proposal.

Panamanian vote favors treaty

Unofficial returns yesterday show Panamanians voted almost two-to-one in favor of the treaties that will give them control of the Panama canal by the year 2000. The unofficial tally from Sunday's nationwide referendum showed a heavy turnout with 374,722 votes in favor of the treaties and 188,035 opposed. Before they can take effect, the canal agreements must be ratified by the U.S. Senate. The Carter administration is expected to seek a Senate vote early next year.

China to convene congress in spring

The Chinese government, in a move to consolidate Chairman Hua Kuo-feng's power, announced Tuesday that it would convene a new National People's Congress next spring, two years ahead of schedule. Peking Radio said standing committees of the current national legislature adopted the decision unanimously Monday after a two-day meeting in the Chinese capital. Hua told standing committee members Sunday that new national and local people's congresses must be elected to eliminate the "poisonous influence" of his radical opponents and "usher in a high tide in socialist economic and cultural construction."

After 30 years of UM registrations, associate admissions director retires

After 30 years, Associate Director of Admissions and Records Emma Lommasson is retiring.

A 1933 graduate of the University of Montana, Lommasson received an M.A. in mathematics from the University of Montana in 1939 and began teaching mathematics.

Since 1946, Lommasson has served as assistant registrar, registrar and associate director of admissions and records at UM.

She said the time has passed quickly and her memories are pleasant, but not clear.

"I'm one of those people who doesn't look back," Lommasson said. "I live for today and tomorrow. I look to the future."

And when the veteran registrar looks to the future of UM she is optimistic.

"I am optimistic that enrollment will go back up because we do have a very fine school," she said. "Through the years, students who go on to graduate school are very well prepared. If a student wants an education, he can get it here."

Lommasson said she watched the enrollment climb from 3,251 in 1946 to 8,436 in fall of 1976. During that growth, there were years when enrollment dropped off considerably.

Lommasson said enrollment dropped sharply in 1959; there has been a gradual decline in the past few years.

"I feel certain that there is still a future for liberal arts colleges," she said.

Lommasson's retirement was effective at the end of the summer. She is currently working part time in the admissions office to get her files in order and will perform some of her old duties until a replacement is found.

Philip Bain, director of admissions and records, said the job has been advertised nationally.

Continuing vandalism threatens UM telescope

The next time someone tries to shoot the lock off the door at the Blue Mountain astronomical observatory, the bullet just might penetrate the telescope tube and shatter the reflecting mirror inside.

Imagine the aluminum-coated pyrex mirror dashed into a thousand shards and slivers. Imagine the $75,000 Boller and Chivens reflecting telescope ruined by a bullet from a high-powered rifle.

Thomas Margrave, associate professor of astronomy at the University of Montana, would prefer not to imagine such a catastrophe.

The thought that the observatory is unprotected either by guards or by an alarm system does not give Margrave "much peace of mind."

"Every time we go up there, we find a new bullet hole," he said yesterday. So far, the bullets have missed the telescope, but one passed through the stainless-steel door during the summer.

Someone tried to blow the lock off the door with a high-powered rifle, Margrave said. The attempt failed but the slug went through the door.

He keeps the chunk of lead in his drawer as a reminder—a reminder to worry about the next bullet that might hit the Cassegrain reflecting mirror.

According to Margrave, the observatory has been vandalized "numerous times" since it was built by UM astronomy department in 1970.

In 1972, Margrave said, the observatory was broken into and lenses, an eye-piece and several other items were stolen. The telescope was left untouched.

"Usually the vandals just shoot holes in the place or climb the hill behind the observatory and lob boulders onto the dome," he said.

The observatory sits on a knoll on the Blue Mountain area southwest of Missoula. From the city it is a long rugged drive. But that doesn't deter hunters who drive up to Blue Mountain to sight in their rifles.

Apparently, some people do not bring their own targets and prefer to blast away at the brown and yellow Forest Service signs along the road. Or if they can find it, the observatory, with its bright silver dome, presents an inviting target.

Margrave wants to install an alarm to catch the people who shoot at the observatory or try to break in.

"If we could get up there fast enough, we could trap them on the mountain," he said.

Red Ryder production opens theater season

When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder?, a play concerning the troubled times of America in the 60's and 70's, will open tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the University Theater. Red Ryder is the season premiere of the Montana Masquers and the department of drama/dance.

Mark Medoff, English professor at New Mexico State University, is the author. According to Medoff, his contact with students there gave him an insight into the disillusionment of young people in a society which no longer has any heroes.

The play is set in a roadside diner in southern New Mexico. Its central character is Teddy, a psychopath who makes innocent bystanders perform outrageous violations of their own dignities for his own amusement.

Illusions destroyed

Once he is in control of the diner and the people inside, Teddy puts a maniacal ability to see through shams to use. He proceeds to take their characters apart, laying bare their secrets and destroying their illusions.

Red Ryder's cast includes

Joseph Arnold, senior in drama, as Teddy. Mary Sigvardt, junior in drama, plays Angel, the loving, cheerful waitress. Stephen "Red" Ryder, the surly kid on the diner's graveyard shift, is played by Michael Brodniak, senior in drama.

The concert violinist Clarisse, is played by Kathie Harris Watson, sophomore in drama. Rich Hutzler, junior in drama, plays her husband; James Lortz, senior in drama, is Lyle, the crippled owner of the motel and gas station; Dona Liggett, senior in drama, is Teddy's girlfriend Cheryl; and Michael Shea, as the cafe owner Clark, rounds out the cast.

According to Kriley, ACTF representatives will judge the UM production for possible presentation at a regional theater festival scheduled for Bozeman in January. The event will run in conjunction with the Montana State Theatre Festival.

Red Ryder will run from tomorrow through Sunday. Admission is $3.00 for the general public and $2.00 for UM students. Tickets are now available from noon to 6 p.m. weekdays in the UT box office.

Reservations may be made by calling either 243-4581 or 549-4926.

Kids learn law

WASHINGTON (AP)—Any student of the world can tell you the law is serious business, but Ken Wilson's fourth-graders from St. Louis do it with a flair not matched in the most prestigious law schools.

Consider these gems:

"A good thing to remember about needing a lawyer is don't."

"A good attorney should keep thinking about his case around-the-clock, 12 days a week."

Notice

Missoula's Rehearsal and Performance theater group is looking for an actor to play the part of Peter, a middle-aged man, in their upcoming production of Edward Albee's Zoo Story.

Requirements are the ability to play the middle-aged character.

Those interested should contact either McCarthy Coyle at 543-8993 or Aubrey Dunkum at 543-5360.

"A terrifically intelligent, witty comedy."

Alain Tanner's
Jonah who will be 25 in the year 2000

Written by Alain Tanner and John Berger, who earlier collaborated on La Salamandre and The Middle of the World, Jonah is a unique kind of social comedy that synthesizes the themes and preoccupations of those films into something fundamentally new. More than any of Tanner's previous films, Jonah scores through humor—humor about the slowness of historical change, about living in an industrialized world, and the need for keeping alive the hopes for social change that were born in the '60s. Plus, Music of the Spheres, a beautiful new short by Jordan Belson. 1977. Color. Montana Premiere.

"We're suggesting Bell has had to lower its prices too low to compete" with independent phone companies now selling their products and services to businesses, Johnson said.

Learning Experience

He said residential customers may have been subsidizing the business sector.

Brazier predicted the hearings would be a learning experience for all the parties involved.

"The case represents a real challenge in terms of case management," he observed. In the past, he said, the PSC "just took the phone company's word" when Mountain Bell asked for more money.

Rezoning . . .

argument by saying there has been an orderly and "high class" commercial development of the area by the property owners.

"Now we drop a bomb on them" and tell them they have to put in "unjustified" multi-family housing, he said. "It would be a breach of honest behavior to turn our backs on the developers."

Ward 1 Alderman Jack Morton noted that needed multi-family housing would break up the commercial growth in Hellgate Canyon.

Earlier in the meeting Ward 4 Alderman Richard Smith moved that the rezoning of the two parcels be considered separately. The motion was defeated 7-4.

Jesse petition fails; kegger rule prevails

By PAT ROWE

Montana Kaimin Reporter

An attempt by Jesse Hall residents to eliminate rules concerning keggers in that hall proved futile last week.

A petition was signed by 258 of 385 residents and was presented to Diana Hellegaard, Jesse's head resident, last Thursday at a dorm council meeting.

Hellegaard, who shares the final decision on dorm policy with the assistant head resident, said she will not change the policy until a better proposal is presented.

The rules imposed this quarter, allow one kegger per night and one keg per kegger.

Hellegaard said the rules were imposed to prevent vandalism, trouble-making transients, distractions to those trying to study and other problems caused by keggers.

She added that the policy was intended to be a starting point to develop another less restrictive policy.

Glenn Johnson, one of the students who initiated the petition, said he thinks the rules are an infringement on the students' privacy.

Johnson, a Central Board member, also said he opposes the rules because he thinks the current situation is no different from last year. He said the residents now buy beer by the bottle or can or use other forms of alcohol because the kegs are not allowed.

Johnson added he does not think the policy prevents vandalism or other problems. He said he often hears people running down the halls and yelling. Three elevators were broken two weeks ago, he said.

Another Jesse Hall resident said that no further action has been planned to get the policy changed.

The petition showed there is a lot of interest in getting the policy changed, Hellegaard said. But she added, "I don't think there is a lot of dissension."

Hellegaard said she thinks the policy has prevented problems at Jesse this year. She added that several of the R.A.'s commented on how quiet the dorm was this weekend.

However, she continued, "I don't like the policy myself. I think it's restrictive, but I feel responsible for the building."

A survey of the other dorms showed that none of them has a policy on keggers, although some R.A.'s have certain restrictions for their floors.

Before the meeting Chinske said that according to city ordinances, if the proposal was defeated, the issue cannot be considered again for another year.
